Why is this lecture important?

This Lecture explains the connection America has to Liberia, introduces and examines the economic philosophies of Marcus Garvey, and advocates for social entrepreneurship education in Africa, as well as low-income communities in the United States.

WHO WE ARE

1up Entertainment/Consulting was created to strategically plan events which promote public awareness (consciousness) while generating revenue for organizations that support changes to community norms and policies. The idea is to work with social entrepreneurs to identify opportunities for strategic policies implementation, show community support, and to develop projects and events that fundamentally promote change in communities.

Brother Saye (Saye Menlekeh Taryor) is an author, critical thinking education & social entrepreneur activist, founder of 1up Entertainment/Consulting and the leading voice for “The 1up Movement.” The Atlanta/Liberian native graduated from Piney Woods Country Life School (a historically black boarding school, located in central Mississippi) in 1992. Soon after, he enrolled in the University of Southern Mississippi, where he pursued a journalism degree. After realizing his true calling was to illuminate young men and women about the importance of social entrepreneurship and critical thinking education, he attended Georgia State University to learn more about critical thinking education and public speaking.

Brother Saye has been active with “Generation Y” leadership workshops, which he first hosted with Linda A. Brooks in 2009. As an activist, he currently promotes his 1up programs and workshops, and is the "Atlanta Travel" writer for the Examiner.com. Brothers Saye’s most recent book entitled, “Overstanding With a 1up Vision, The Critical Thinking Approach to Liberation” has received praise throughout the conscious community.

Other published works include, Child development and the importance of critical thinking education, Critical thinking approach to voting, Part II, “The 2009 1up Entertainment Music Guide and Directory, Vol. 1,”

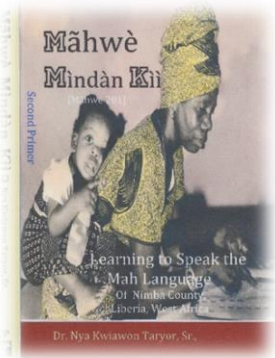

“Country Life School,” “What Do You Think?” and, “A Fathers Burden.”
